

Thomas Moses

Junior Partner

Knowledgeable. Practical. Communicative.

Thomas Moses is a seasoned insurance defense attorney with over 41 years of experience. Known for his analytical knowledge and pragmatic approach to complex legal issues, Thomas excels at analyzing difficult insurance policy interpretation questions and in providing accurate liability analyses based upon his stellar legal research skills and writing abilities. He has achieved good results when his cases have been resolved via alternative dispute resolution or appeal.

UNIQUE PROFESSIONAL BACKGROUND

Over the course of Thomas's career, he has represented suppliers, distributors, and product manufacturers in state and federal asbestos litigation and served as in-house claims counsel for two major national property-casualty insurers. He successfully defended national insurers in bad faith lawsuits throughout Texas and provided comprehensive advice and training regarding insurance claims "best practices."

As a founding member of the State Bar of Texas Insurance Law Section in 2001, Thomas leverages his deep legal expertise and understanding of case dynamics to provide clients with transparent, insightful evaluations. His unwavering commitment to self-improvement ensures he remains at the forefront of the industry, consistently offering thoughtful and strategic assessments of the risks his clients face.

In addition to his practice, Thomas is passionate about education. He has taught elective courses on Insurance Law at two law schools (Texas Wesleyan [now Texas A&M] and the University of San Francisco), sharing with his students his extensive knowledge of the insurance industry and, through his teaching, demonstrated a deep appreciation for the logical application of law to real-world insurance coverage scenarios.

Thomas's talent for creating clear, actionable strategies, combined with his deep knowledge of insurance law, has made him a trusted advisor and advocate. Thomas Moses is committed to building lasting relationships and focuses on identifying, implementing, and executing winning strategies for his peers and clients.
